Nipponese Industry On Continent Objective For Big Force

By International News Service
American Superfortress bombers marked the opening of a fourth year of conflict with Japan today by attacks on the important industrial city of Mukden in the port of Dairen in Jap-occupied Manchuria, while the Japs said, incendiary bombs were dropped also on Tokyo.

Japanese army sources, according to the Tokyo radio, said approximately 70 big B-29 Superfortresses carried out the daylight attack on the targets in Manchuria.

Three or four other Superfortresses unloaded incendiaries on Tokyo and started a fire in one area, the Japs said.

Headquarters of the United States 20th Air Force said a large task force of 20th Bomber Command Superfortresses based in China had carried out attacks on war production centers in Manchuria, but the dropping of incendiaries on Tokyo was not confirmed immediately.

The Japs claimed that 11 of the B-29's were shot down over Manchuria and asserted that four more probably were destroyed.

The Tokyo announcement was based on a report by the Japanese Kwangtung army group.

The incendiaries, according to a Jap Domei Agency dispatch recorded by the FCC, were dropped on Tokyo at 2 a. m. (1 p. m. Wednesday EWT).

"A small fire was caused to start at one point," the Japs said. The Manchuria attack was concentrated on southern areas of the Jap-occupied Chinese territory, according to Domei, but no details of the specific targets were given immediately.

Washington said that B-29's of the 20th Bomber Command had carried out the assault against Jap war production centers in Manchuria.

Further details were promised when more information becomes available.

The Japs claimed they countered the American action with a new raid on Asitomo airfield, Saipan is (Continued on Page Two)

RAF Joins War Against Greek NAM

Left Wing Strongholds Blasted—7,000 Mass For Drive On Capital

ATHENS, Dec. 7 — Royal Air Force fighter planes went into action again early today to blast strongholds held by left-wing EAM (National Liberation Front) forces in the Greek capital.

The British airmen took to the skies at 8:15 to resume assaults against ELAS militiamen, the armed forces of the EAM, entrenched at the foot of the temple of Jupiter.

The planes fired 20 millimeter shells into the ELAS positions after attacks carried out just before dusk last night failed to dislodge the rebellious forces.

ELAS forces were said in reports to British battle headquarters to be reforming in an attempt to infiltrate into Athens.

(An Athens dispatch to the London Daily Mail said that 7,000 partisan troops were known to be massing outside the capital in readiness for an attempted all-out assault on the city.)

British troops throughout the night moved to weed out resistance points held by the ELAS.

Although the Greeks continued to fight from trenches and rooftops, headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Ronald M. Scobie, British commander, indicated that fighting in the Athens-Piraeus area had lessened.

Greek government forces supported the British in the street battles to clear the ELAS forces from parts of the city. An official communique said there was definite evidence that numerous former German soldiers were in the ranks of the ELAS forces.

The British continued to employ both armored cars and tanks in their drive to quell the uprising resulting from a refusal by the EAM militia to turn in their arms.

British paratroop forces engaged in house to house fighting to root out snipers from positions along the main road between Athens and Piraeus.

WAR VESTMENTS AUTHORIZED BY PAPAL ORDER

NEW YORK, Dec. 7—Roman Catholic chaplains—for the first time in the history of the Catholic church—were permitted today to substitute khaki-colored vestments and altar cloths for the traditional white in combat areas.

The Holy See authorized the departure at the request of the Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, archbishop of New York and Roman Catholic military vicar to the armed forces. He pointed out that the traditional white increased the hazards of priests saying mass or administering to wounded men within range of snipers.

Right Rev. James H. Griffiths, chancellor of the military ordinariate, said that only three small altar cloths—the corporal, the pall and the purificator, which come in contact with the sacred host—were excluded from the exemption. These, he explained, were small and inconspicuous.

Monsignor Griffiths also reported that more than three dozen American priests had died on duty, at least 12 of whom were killed in combat areas.

RECORD QUAKE SHAKES PACIFIC AREA SIX HOURS

LONDON, Dec. 7—The West Bromwich observatory early today recorded the most violent earthquake registered on its seismograph in many years.

The epicenter was not learned immediately, but readings indicated the temblor had occurred somewhere in the Aleutian islands, the Kurile Islands or Japan.

Seismologist J. J. Shaw said: "The whole earth was vibrating for six hours after the shock."

Germans Must Yield Saar for Defense Of Ruhr, Allies Believe

LONDON, Dec. 7—Strong belief prevails in Allied military circles today that Germany will soon be forced to yield the Saar region in a desperate effort to save the Ruhr.

The tremendous pressure which General Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander, is bringing to bear with his Allied armies on Germany's west wall is so severe that military observers believe Field Marshal Rundstedt will be forced to shorten his front drastically in order to maintain strong resistance on the vital northern sector.

Rundstedt's efforts to draw in his left flank already is regarded as the first step toward a retreat to a shorter front.

Big Allied Success
Meanwhile, the initial phase of General Eisenhower's gigantic Winter offensive to smash the backbone of the German western armies on the west side of the Rhine already is considered to have scored successes both strategically and tactically.

General Eisenhower's objective in the first weeks of the campaign has been to draw the enemy's reserves into premature action. This has been accomplished in the Maas, Aachen and Saar sectors.

It is believed that General Eisenhower's strategy has drawn two-thirds of Rundstedt's available forces forward to the west bank of the Rhine. These divisions are being compelled to fight back to the Rhine.

Decisive Battle
It is the supreme commander's intention that few of them shall succeed in getting back across the Rhine. If they can be smashed on the West bank, allied military observers are agreed that the decisive battle of Germany in the west will have been won.

The Germans are fighting desperately to prolong the war in the hope that the development of so-called secret weapons, such as jet-propelled planes and rocket shells, will become sufficiently effective (Continued on Page Two)

"RED MARKET" PROVING HARD NUT FOR OPA

NEW YORK, Dec. 7—An OPA spokesman said today that the Office of Price Administration has a hard nut to crack in the newest development in food rationing—the "red market."

He declared retail butchers throughout the country are defrauding housewives of millions of meat and butter ration points by exacting red points for beef and lamb represented as of upper-grade quality when in actuality the cuts come from carcasses in the unrationed "utility meats" category.

Regional OPA Director Daniel P. Woolley admitted that "considerably more" utility meat is shipped into New York City than appears as such in retail markets in the metropolis.

BYRNES MOVES TO SPEED FULL WAR PRODUCTION

Military Leaders Fearful Peace May Be Delayed By Shortages

WASHINGTON, DEC. 7—Expansion of War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes' personal staff today further augured the government's decision to insist upon all-out war production—even at the expense of civilian reconversion—until Germany is defeated.

"While the office of War Mobilization and reconversion will not overlook for a moment the planning which must be done for the transition from war to peace," Byrnes said, "it is continuing to assist the several agencies responsible for war procurement in a renewed and intensified production drive."

"It is the immediate purpose of this organization to coordinate the problems of manpower supply, production, and transportation to assure a maximum flow of needed munitions from the factory assembly line to the front line as long as may be necessary to bring about final victory."

Byrnes appointed Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, director of material for the army service forces, as his deputy director, in charge of expediting the delivery of critical war materials to Europe and the Pacific.

Clay, who recently returned from an inspection tour of the European battlefield, is known to have sided with the army group in opposing former WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson's inauguration of "spot authorization" reconversion procedure last August.

With "spot authorization" now suspended for 90 days in some 126 U. S. communities, Byrnes' office thus moved to speed support of Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the army service forces, who told the National Association of Manufacturers in New York that munitions are (Continued on Page Two) about in both directions in the Lin-nich area of the Ninth Army front, northwest of Jülich.

At the same time observations disclosed that the Germans were again employing night lighting in the area between the front and the Rhine as occurred mysteriously
once before.

On both Tuesday and Wednesday night fighter pilots saw lights between the First Army front and the Rhine. Some of the lights were stationary and some moving.

Previous night lighting by the enemy led to the speculation that the Germans, hard-pressed to move up their supplies and establish defenses against the American front, needed the illumination to speed
their work.

Snipers Active

While the bulk of the Germans facing the Ninth Army have been driven back across the Roer, headquarters reported snipers still active west of the river, notably in the villages of Flossberg and Bar-men.

The First Army put down three fierce German counter-attacks aimed at reclaiming the captured village of Bergstein and continued to engage the Nazis in heavy fighting around Vossenack.

Gen. Patton's troops tightening their grip on the Saar region
smashed into Wehrden, five miles west of Saarbrücken and were in control of two-thirds of Sarreguemines, to the southeast.

Bitter tank clashes were reported in progress in the Rohrbach area, 15 miles southeast of Saarbrücken.

North of the threatened city the Yanks expanded the bridgehead established in the Dillingen sector, above Saarlautern, and battled the Germans inside Dillingen.

Troops of the Seventh Army, in an advance of more than three miles against scattered German resistance, took eight villages on the western slope of the lower Vosges mountains east of Sarre union.

The Seventh's advance in conjunction with the Third Army northwest of Haguenau, along the route to Karlsruhe, was resisted
stubbornly by the Germans.

In the drive southward across the Alsace plain for a junction with the French First Army, the Seventh sent its forces into Os-theim and freed that town five miles north of strategic Colmar.

Gen. Patton's forces drove the Germans from two-thirds of Sarreguemines, ousting the enemy from all positions of the city west of the Saar.

The Germans, after falling back to the east bank, began hurling mortar shells into the town against the Americans, but only moderate damage resulted.

Surrounding territory in the vicinity of Sarreguemines also was falling rapidly into American control.

The unchecked onslaught by Gen.
Patton's many divisions gave the Americans a hold along approximately 30 miles of the Saar river,
and in the push on the prize city
of Saarbrücken the Yanks stormed into Wehrden, only five miles to the west.

Bridgeheads established in the Saarlautern area above Saarbrücken were merged despite intense German artillery fire from the Siegfried line.

First Army Holds

The Americans of the First
Army, after downing the three German counter-blow against Bergstein with the support of Allied air forces, retained their hold on all recent gains. The Germans apparently launched their assault
in an effort to save the supply base of Duren, a score of miles from Cologne, from early capitulation.

Along the Ninth Army front where forces assembled along the Roer river threaten Jülich, a key supply base of the enemy, American dive-bombers hurled six tons of explosives into German positions, concentrating on the sports-palast west of Jülich where Nazi rearguard forces are making a deperate stand.

Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's
Seventh Army fought forward
through blinding snow storms, cloud covered mountain passes and along flooded valley floors to enter Osheim, nine miles north of the pivotal position of Colmar. Street fighting raged in Osheim but German resistance there was reported weakening.

The British Eighth Army swept up the Adriatic coast from liberated Ravenna in a successful push which engulfed the town of Mezzano on the Rimini-Ferrara highway and cleared the entire area
east of the Lamone river of Nazi resistance. Polish columns with the Eighth Army also brought the long battle for the communications hub of Faenza nearer a climax with a thrust which seized strategical Mount San Rinaldo and wrested the town of Brisighella
from Nazi control.

The American Fifth Army
launched a series of aggressive patrols and improved its forward positions. At the same time Allied

Imperial headquarters issued a communique asserting that the Jap planes which were said to have attacked at dawn had set fire "to more than 10 planes and to more than 10 installations" in addition to having damaged other craft by bombing.

The broadcast communique reporting this unconfirmed attack
said that "on the runways making preparations to set out for attacks." Tokyo admitted that two of the Jap raiders had "destroyed themselves" and said "a few" other planes had not returned to base.

According to Domei, the Manchuria assault was carried out between 10 and 10:30 a. m. (9 p. m.
Wednesday EWT).

Domei termed the new Tokyo incendiary bombing a "war of nerves mission."

Previously the Tokyo radio had reported the presence of a small number of American craft over the capital, but claimed that anti-aircraft fire had driven the planes off before any bombs were dropped.

"About 2 a. m. this morning," Domei said, "three or four B-29's
again appeared over the capital, dropping a small number of incendiaries."

"A small fire was caused to start at one point which, however, was immediately extinguished. It is believed that these enemy planes were on a mission of the war of nerves aimed at the people on the home front."

The Domei account of the Manchuria assault claimed that several Superfortress planes were shot down by Jap interceptors.

It was claimed also that one
B-29 was brought down by a bodily crash attack made by a plane of the National Army of Manchukuo (Japan's puppet army in Manchuria.)

NEW YORK—Coast Guard may

they still maintain their traditional life saving technique. Five thou-

by the Coast Guard Public Re-sand vessels and forty planes were assisted and ninety-eight persons rescued from drowning, the figures show. The figures exclude military vessels and military personnel in-more than 1,500 were launched through a break in the weather

against southern Europe, Northern Italy and the Po valley.

The Russians ranged through southwestern Hungary on a 150-mile front as Moscow reported advances of 95 miles across the sodden Hungarian plain during the last seven days at a speed which exceeded the famed Nazi blitz
through Poland and France earlier in the war.

1,700 HUN LIVES SAVED BY YANKS

U. S. Troops Prevent Nazis
From Sealing Cave On Balky Germans

WITH THE U. S. THIRD ARMY
ON THE SAAR FRONT, Dec. 7—
Some 1,700 German civilians escaped burial alive in their hideout mountain cave near the Saar river when the sudden appearance of American troops forced Nazi volksstrum authorities to flee before they could dynamite the entrance, American officers disclosed
today.

The civilians were threatened with death in their primitive hideout located on the grounds of the Summer retreat of Franz von Papen, former ambassador to Turkey, for defying the orders of Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler's volksstrum to move back into the interior of Germany.

The volksstrum's threat to seal
the entrance with a dynamite blast
and convert the hideout into a coffin of the living was frustrated by infantry of the 90th Division of the Third Army.

The Yanks discovered the cave
by tracing wisps of white smoke and cooking odors until they stood before the steel-grilled gates on Sierburg mountain, on the west
banks of the Saar river eight miles northwest of Saarlautern.

An investigation disclosed that the populace of eight Saar villages
had fled to the cave to escape enforced evacuation which began
more than a month ago.

The volksstrum actually had piled stacks of dynamite at the entrance. The pleadings of village priests caused the volksstrum officers to delay their hands and then the sudden appearance of an American reconnaissance force caused a pell-mell flight by the volksstrum.

Inside the cave a bizarre community life was maintained. There was a common kitchen which had been installed in the central sector. The primary menu was stew.
The first time German authorities ordered the civilians to leave the cave a priest sent a message to von Papen asking permission for the civilians to remain on his grounds. It is asserted that von Papen refused to sanction their eviction.

Civilians generally in this area
now are convinced that Himmler controls the destiny of Germany and that Hitler is no longer the major power but they are unable to offer any explanation for his long silence.

They see little hope for an internal revolt within the Reich. A priest, acting as spokesman, said
the Nazi party was too strongly entrenched throughout the Reich
for such a move to have any hope of success.

in on the ELAS units from behind

pets. The Britons suffered numerous casualties, including troops
who were killed.

Some 3,000 ELAS men were reported taken prisoner in operations
so far.

Principal fighting occurred around the Temple of Jupiter and in the area of the Acropolis.
ELAS units established less than half a mile from the center of Athens were attempting to cut the road to Piraeus.

The fighting in the area of the Acropolis became hot when Greek forces fired on armored British cars and tanks which had moved up to relieve Britons protecting the Acropolis.

The situation in Piraeus itself
was quiet according to last reports.

here, identified a check allegedly cashied by Sanders as one issued by the company. Linden Baughman, personnel manager, and John P.
Moore, strawyard supervisor, testified to the procedure followed in paying for straw.

Chief of Police W. F. McCrady testified he heard Sanders admit
he received a check for straw which he did not deliver, cashed
the check and paid part of the money to a Container employee.

Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious
said on the stand he had heard Sanders admit he "had an arrangement" with employees of the plant and that Sanders had admitted receiving money for false weigh slips.

Norbert Cochran, manager of the local plant, testified he signed charges against Sanders.

Prosecutor Gerhardt charged that Sanders obtained fraudulently
a weigh bill from the plant and received $100 for it. In his case he charged Sanders was paid through the regular office procedure for straw which he did not deliver because of falsified weigh slips
which were turned into the plant
by an employee of the company
who later collected from Sanders.

BYRNES MOVES TO SPEED FULL WAR PRODUCTION

Maximum Flow Of Needed

being used faster than the current production rate.

Some quarters expressed belief that the Army regards the current allied offensive on the Western Front in Europe as the decisive phase in the war against Germany and that military officials fear the war will be prolonged and thousands of lives lost if the drive slows down from lack of material.

To bolster the munitions program, the War Manpower Commission disclosed that more than 130,000 additional war workers must be recruited to produce artillery, mortar and shell armamunition and component parts.

Byrnes' other appointments included J. B. Hutson, president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, as deputy director to supervise the transition of agriculture
from war to peace. Fred Searis, former OWM employee, was named Byrnes' adviser on manpower problems.

Meanwhile, former Gov. O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, who was designated by President Roosevelt as chairman of the War
Mobilization and Reconversion
Advisory Board planned to convene the group for its first meeting next Monday.

friend of the German officer.

In the meantime French people whose own apartment had been requisitioned by the Germans during the occupation, have been trying in vain to rent the officer's apartment.

The landlord has explained his curious position thus: Since the German is the legal tenant, holding a lease and paying rent, the lease cannot be reassigned, though he did report the matter to the police. Interminable red tape would be necessary to wipe out the Ger-man's tenancy.

NAM OPTIMISTIC ON EMPLOYMENT FOLLOWING WAR

Promise Made To Hoist Employment Level Beyond 1939 Peak

NEW YORK, DEC. 7.—The premature trend of war workers toward jobs outside war-essential industries was countered today by a promise from the National Association of Manufacturers of a post-war employment level 30 per cent above that of 1939.

Chairman William P. Witherow of the NAM executive committee, making public results of a nationwide survey, said it indicated further that at no time during the period of conversion to peacetime production will employment fall below the 1939 level.

This assurance that war workers need not scramble now for peacetime jobs to assure themselves of postwar incomes came as the NAM pledged full support to the plea of Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of the Army service forces, that 300,000 workers return to their vacated war jobs to help supply critically needed materials for the battle fronts.

Witherow, who is president of the Blaw-Knox Company, Pittsburgh steel firm, said the NAM survey showed 95 per cent of all industry could complete reconversion to civilian production within two months after the government gives the "green light," and that 75 per cent would attain peak production within that interval.

Witherow spoke at the NAM's 49th annual meeting, attended in New York by 2,300 industrialists, at which WPB chairman J. A. Krug urged industry to concentrate on wiping out the current lag in production of 40 per cent of needed war materials, 27 per cent of them in the "critically needed" category.

Pickaway county voters will participate in an election again Saturday.

To be elected are five district supervisors for the recently-created Pickaway county soil conservation district. Eligible to vote are all land owners in the county.

The Pickaway district was established by the Ohio conservation committee September 22 after farmers had voted for the setup in the county. County Agent F. K. Blair stated that plans for the program will be made following the election of supervisors and the soil and water conservation practices may be started next spring.

Directors will be chosen from these nominees: F. A. Beatty, Muhlenberg township; S. E. Beers, Ashville; Willard Betz, Ashville; Wayne Brown, Madison township; T. L. Cromely, Ashville; John Dunlap Jr., Williamsport; Glen Hay, Ashville; Lawrence Liston, Route 3, Circleville; Wayne Luckhart, Saltcreek township; Ralph May, Route 1 Stoutsville; Paul Peck, New Holland.

Slipping or Irritating? Don't be embarrassed by loose false teeth slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, talk or laugh. Just sprinkle a little PASTETECH on your plates. This pleasant powder gives a remarkable sense of added comfort and security by holding plates more firmly. No gummy, soapy, nasty taste or feeling. It's alkaline (non-acid). Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up at night. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pen and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

The Germans have troops, too—remember that. The bulk of their Baltic armies got out by water. They even got their men out of Finland. The Russians have taken some prisoners in the last three months, but no armies. Always against us as against the Reds, the Nazis are able to muster counter attacks to offset our superior power. Why, once on the Aachen front they offset our turning attack against both their flanks by daring to attack us in the center, so the offensive and counter-offensive were simultaneously in action.

By these means, the Nazis have successfully turned the war into a tree-to-tree, house-to-house struggle which history may account the most bitterly contested campaign of all time, surpassing even our own Civil War in desperation of fighting. Unquestionably they hope to keep it that way right up to Berlin and beyond into the hills. There is a world revolutionary cause. The skilled professionals are whipping up the fury of the people, easily lashed when a homeland is invaded.

Some bystanders are therefore suggesting we might take the Saar, Ruhr, let the Russians get Czechoslovakia (where much German industry is) and then sit down and let the Nazis starve in their lair. This is not our plan, however. We are accumulating more and more power—A tank possibly for every machine gun, five men for every one (our landings have certainly placed over 3,000,000 men on the western end of the continent already) to big-gun, out-man and dynamite our way through.

This is certainly the time to buy bonds.

THREE YEARS OF WAR

THE United States has just completed its third year of war. To many Americans the period since Pearl Harbor seems so long that they can hardly remember back before war. There have been so many changes that the difficult life has become almost normal. There have been big things to bear— anxiety, sacrifice, sorrow. Small discomforts, too—cold houses, rationing, lack of gas. These have all melted into one way of life, which seems to have begun ages ago, and due to go on indefinitely, perhaps interminably, into the future.

People in Great Britain have endured five years of this—with bombing. People in France have endured nearly five years under German rule, with humiliation to all and actual suffering to many. The Greeks know the face of starvation. The Poles have suffered most of all, and for the longest time.

It has been a horrible experience. Beauties once blossomed from pioneering troubles—beauties of human courage and power. The human race can rise supreme over all tribulation. But when tribulation lasts too many years, it multiplies its effects. The rising becomes so hard and long.

Americans can only pray that this burden may soon be lifted from the shoulders of the world. They can further prayer by work and serious thought.

FIFTY YEARS OF MOVIES

THE Postoffice Department's latest special stamp commemorate the fiftieth year of the moving picture. So intimately has the screen play woven itself into American life that it is hard to realize how new it is. Plenty of people still living grew up without ever having seen or heard of the movies.

While there has been immense technical progress from the halting flicker of the nickelodeon of the '90's to today's technicolor, the first film patrons might, if they suddenly returned to life, be equally surprised at the publicity given the actors and actresses. For a long time screen actors were anonymous. Before Mary Pickford's name was publicized, she was known only as the "Biograph Girl", the leading lady of the pictures produced by the Biograph Co.

SMOKERS, BE CALM

A census undertaken by a newspaper man finds a considerable range in the number of cigaret packages possessed by smokers. The average accumulation is reported to be 3.5 packs. Obviously such a hoard would not sustain life, liberty and a contented spirit very long, if the source of the supply dried up. So in this and thousands of other cases, the situation hovers on the brink of tragedy.

Still, the authorities say that about as

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—Swift-moving daily news from the German front tell of villages continuously taken or rivers crossed—only rarely of a loss of ground by us. This buoyant information beclouds from the general public an appreciation of the fact that after months of the hardest kind of effort (since early September) we are today only 10 to 12 miles inside Germany in the Aachen area and only a mile or two inside with our deepest penetration in the south (Saar) we are just up to or barely into the Siegfried line of German defense.

The professional soldiers have taken over leadership in Nazidom and are playing with extraordinary skill their desperate, suicidal game of delaying us near the border until Spring. Inside Germany they are ardently drilling the old men and 15-year-old boys procured by their last-ditch levies upon the people. Not many of these have appeared yet on the fighting front. They are the army being trained for Spring, and it is evident Germany will be stronger then than now.

This show is being run by Rundstedt, a crafty Prussian general. Wherever Hitler is (sick, insane, dead) he is not directing this savage, skilled defense which has turned the very nature of the war. To give you an example how it goes (from the detailed reports of the fighting now available here): General Patton could not get at the German defenses until the Metz forts were captured, as mountains up to 3,000 feet protect either side. He picked one to take first, named Driant, 5 miles south of Metz. Our gallant attacking force, under cover of artillery fire got up the hill, into the moat, took one corner of the fort. We poured fuel oil down the vents, set fire to them. Flame throwers blistered the interior of every gun mount. Both sides used grenades, bazookas, machine guns and we used dynamite and 1,000-lb. bombs for ten days and ten nights. Then we had to withdraw to wait for more power to be gathered. The Nazis had a road down the other side of the hill, poured men in each night to take the place of all we killed during the day. Not until the overwhelming power came, was Patton able to capture these initial outposts of the German defense system.

Our original scheme for German conquest was skillfully conceived, at the Dutch salient. With the most spectacular air operation in history we sent more than 10,000 men in 1,000 gliders and transports from 25 airfields in Britain to get the Masstricht bridgehead with its four-lane concrete highway straight into northern Germany. That was last September 17. We have not taken it yet.

All the world now knows our other two airborne divisions could not get up to Arnhem on the four-lane road to open the route for supplies and only 2,000 of the furthest men escaped. This was due to the skill largely of the Nazi commander Gen. Bittrich who concentrated his whole corps on the Arnhem parachutists and adeptly cut the road behind them, lost it, retook it, covered it with artillery fire making it useless when finally he could not hold it. Otherwise we would have ridden down that four-lane road into northern Germany, (Continued on Page Five) many cigarets as ever are being produced, and there will really be enough for all of us after the quotas for overseas are provided, if we keep calm and don't try to grab more than our share.

DIET AND HEALTH

A Winning Fight

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE ARTICLES which I publish at this time of year are designed to correspond to the campaign for the sale of the Christmas seals of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The income from the sale of these seals goes to promote the work which is making this disease disappear from our civilization. That it is actually doing this is abundantly proved by statistics.

There has been a long fight and there is a long continuous fight ahead of us for 50 years. But we have the guns and the means to gain the victory. We would like everybody to have the satisfaction of having a share: so buy the Christmas seals. They won't break you. If every home in America bought a dollar's worth it would go a long way.

I say we have the guns, the means, the weapons now in our hands to eliminate the disease. The difficulties are that it takes time and that people are not alert to the possibilities of danger. What our present program requires is that every person who has tuberculosis must be detected, diagnosed and treated. That means that every person must be examined. It is called the case-finding program, and, as can be imagined is not easy because it depends upon the entire cooperation of the populace.

Diagnosis of Tuberculosis
Our ideas of the best way of diagnosis of tuberculosis have entirely changed in the last 25 years and today make up a much simpler procedure. Briefly, it is to take an X-ray of the chest. This, of course, detects only tuberculosis in the lungs. Tuberculosis occurs in other organs, but it is only tuberculosis of the lungs that is the contagious form—the spreader of the disease. So those are the cases we want to find.

The story of diagnosis of tuberculosis is a romantic chapter in the history of science. Only a little over a hundred years ago, there was no objective way of determining its presence. All the doctors could do was guess from symptoms. And symptoms are notoriously misleading in this disease.

A newspaper household hint item tells us how to preserve spinach. Sometimes, it seems, there is a thing like knowing too much.

Then a young Austrian, named Auenbrugger, the son of an innkeeper, remembered that his father used to slap his barrels of wine to tell how full they were. The chest is a good deal like a barrel, so Auenbrugger, when he became a doctor, slapped, tapped or percussed chests and could tell whether they were sound and air filled or infiltrated with solidifications.

That was the first step in objective diagnosis—something that could be determined by the physician himself.

Discovery of Stethoscope

Then a young Frenchman, named Laennec, had the inspiration of seeing children in the park telegraphing pin scratches along a seesaw board, of rolling up a sheet of paper and putting one end on the chest of a patient and the other end to his ear. This resulted in the stethoscope, which detects plenty of objective signs in the chest and lungs.

Then Koch, a country practitioner of Wollstein in East Prussia, found that by special staining methods one could detect the perfectly characteristic germ of tuberculosis in the sputum of the affected patient.

All these methods are still useful and used, but they have some faults from the standpoint of tuberculosis up to date. Briefly, the faults are that they detect late cases readily, early cases with uncertainty. Because the disease may be deep and be silent many cases are missed entirely.

The X-ray of the chest makes the diagnosis with proper interpretation in nearly 100 per cent of cases. It can be done on large numbers of people rapidly with very little expense. For case finding in large groups it is by all means the best method. It is the major weapon of diagnosis in our grim warfare against this ancient enemy.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

"I took my slippers off so as to creep past the door without being noticed. I was just about to do so when I saw Anna waiting for me and went back and got a pair of her own. I wasn't afraid of her. But when we got here she wouldn't talk. All day I've been trying to persuade her. But she's still half-crazy with fear. Finally, when I said if she wouldn't tell me whatever it was she had promised to tell me, I was going back to the Brent house, she stopped me. She got a knife from the kitchen."

I thought of the knife in the hall. That was why it was near the door and the telephone, so Anna could snatch it up and prevent Drue's leaving.

"I don't think she would really hurt me," whispered Drue again in a voice that denied her words. "But she threatened. Even suicide."

I interrupted again, catching Drue's wrist for silence. We both listened, and I was sure that a door closed softly downstairs.

The front door? Perhaps Alexia was gone. For a long moment there was no sound at all; gradually I became convinced that she'd gone and that, except for Drue and me the house was empty again. In any case we had to get away. Hurriedly I whispered to Drue. She swept up her cape and put it around her shoulders.

I took a long breath and opened the door quietly. Nothing happened. After a moment, my revolver well in advance, I poked my head out into the hall. When I was sure it was empty, I motioned to Drue to follow me. We tiptoed toward the back stairs.

It was just then that I realized that I didn't have the piece of paper with those notes about digitalis written upon it. I must have dropped it in the study. I whispered to Drue, "I've got to get something," and went quickly toward the front stairs, leaving her in the upper hall.

I went down a step at a time, pausing to look and listen, and wishing the tread would break. Halfway down, I wished I'd given her the revolver; I'd forgotten I had it. At the bottom of the stairs, I turned into the study. Somehow it was too silent in the house; the silence had a quality of hushed waiting. As if from somewhere eyes were watching me.

Yet the room was undisturbed, quite as it had been, and no one was in the niche of the windows where I had stood. I reached it and pulled back the curtain. On the floor lay a flat piece of paper. I stooped and picked it up before I drew a breath.

It was only then that I saw it was a note, only a few lines, written on one side of the paper. It was so short a note that I read it instantly, then in the growing dusk, holding it so the last light fell through the window upon it. The handwriting was as black and neat as printing.

I don't like being put off like this. I know what I'm doing. I don't want anyone's advice. I have the money, and am ready to give it to you to use as you see fit. M. Chivory.

A DAY OF astonishing and extraordinary events and developments, with great excitement, commotion and possibly drastic action. There may be a deep spading up, with old fastnesses, roots, and ties, subject to sudden upheaval, of far-reaching effect on the life, its enjoyments and good fortune. This could possibly be due to an explosive, thrilling or dramatic cataclysm, either in a physical, mental or emotional sense, or in connection with natural causes, like fires, explosions or machinery. With precaution, sound judgment and sane conduct, there is prospect of unforeseen benefits, and probably spectacular romantic adventures and festivity.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of exceptional excitement, commotion, agitation or sensational adventure, reaching to the very foundations of life, its fortunes, enjoyments and security. It is a catastrophic visitation, of profound, spectacular and dramatic force, devastating and uprooting. There may be separations as well as unions, emotional and spectacular, with celebrations of extraordinary events. There also may be explosions, accidents or other catastrophe calling for sane and Maud. It confirmed my feeling that Dr. Chivory had connected the notes about digitalis with Maud; so he had kept it a secret; he had replaced the paper in the book on toxicology; he had told Craig something of his indecision; he had referred to Maud by the use of a feminine pronoun and Craig had thought that he might have referred to Drue.

Who else then had known? And had killed Chivory to keep him quiet. I turned over the paper; the notes on digitalis were on the other side of it.

And all at once four things leaped out from the chaos of seemingly unrelated fact and surmise. They strung themselves together like knots on a rope. And a fifth thing suddenly added itself. A motive for Conrad's shooting Craig by mistake and in self-defense. A motive for Conrad's murder. And, because of that, a motive for Dr. Chivory's murder which was the paper in my hand.

It wasn't all clear in detail. In fact it was like a blaze of light in a dark room. And it was just then as I stood there, stunned by that sudden coherence and understanding, that someone laughed softly somewhere near me.

I whirled around, crushing the paper in my hand and shoving it under my cape into my pocket along with a medicine box and a clipping. Alexia was standing in the doorway of the consulting room, watching me quietly, her face a pale triangle in the dusk.

I had the revolver. I had only to call to Drue for help. Then I saw that Alexia had put down the knife somewhere, for her hands were empty. Nevertheless my heart was in my throat.

She said suddenly, in a low, rather lazy voice, "So it's you. Meddling again."

I wanted that letter. And Drue was safe so long as I had my eyes on Alexia. I held the revolver so she couldn't fail to see it, even in the dusk that filled the room.

In what must have been a kind of stupefied attempt at reason I said, "Let's talk this over quietly, Mrs. Brent."

It had the quality of a delirious understatement. I plunged on, still unable to think. "I'm glad you put the knife down. That would only make things worse..."

"Oh, would it?" she said, half smiling. There was a little silence. And in the silence I heard the stairway creak again.

Someone was creeping up those stairs. Drue was alone up there, and I had to deal somehow with Alexia...

Alexia? Suddenly in a stab of uncertainty, I wasn't sure. The pointed, smiling face was only a pale triangle among shadows. Was it Alexia or Nicky? If Nicky—why, then Nicky had never had the knife! It was Alexia who had had that. So it was Nicky standing there smiling at me, it must be Alexia creeping up the stairs, with the knife still in her hand.

But all at once, Drue's voice floated down the stairway, through the dusk. She said on a note of question: "Craig? Oh, Peter, Peter Huber! What are you...?" Her voice stopped uncertainly. Seemed to hang there in the silence and dusk.

Then suddenly she screamed. It was high and thin and terrible. And stopped as if choked off by hands.

The figure in the doorway sprang toward me just as I lifted Chivory's revolver and fired in that direction. But the gun wasn't loaded; it clicked empty and I flung it full at that pale, triangular face just as Alexia reached for me. It was Alexia, not Nicky. In that split second of nearness I was sure of that. She swerved and ducked to avoid the revolver and I twisted past her; she snatched at my cape and it came off my shoulders as I reached the door to the hall.

The outside door was open and someone was running up the stairs; someone who must have entered as I evaded Alexia. It was a man in slacks and a sweater and there were sounds in the dark little hall upstairs and I ran up the stairs after that figure leaping ahead of me into the dusk.

I came out into the upper hall. It was so dark that I could only see motion and hear it; a struggle somewhere in that narrow little passage, for there was the sound of fists, a thud against a wall and then Drue's voice, "Craig! Look out!"

Then I stumbled on a chair. And at the same time got a view of figures, silhouetted against the gray windows at the front, struggling.

So I took up the chair. It was quite light. But sturdy. It made a resounding crack. I struck again but it wasn't really necessary. One of the dark figures paused, swayed a little, and just sagged down on the floor and lay there.

I took a look at the figure on the floor, at Craig leaning against the banister, panting heavily, staring downward too; at Drue who was running toward Craig, and I put down the chair deliberately. And then sat down in it as deliberately. And leaned back my head...

There were noises from downstairs; women's voices came shrilly and jerkily to my ears. I knew dimly that Alexia's was one of them... But I wasn't prepared for what I saw when—suddenly aware that I had closed my eyes at something and that now a light from somewhere was beating upon my eyelids—I made a determined and difficult effort, and opened them again.

I wasn't in the upstairs hall at all. I was stretched out at full length on the table in Dr. Chivory's examining room. Something cold and wet was on my forehead.

I don't know how they got me there. Drue insisted that I walked but didn't seem to know where I was going and that I relaxed upon the table.

I do know that the sliced-off view I had through the door into Dr. Chivory's study both cleared my head and brought me to a sitting position.

DON'T UNDER-ESTIMATE

MANY BRIDGE players make the same mistake the Japs did when they pulled their sneak attack on us three years ago today. They under-estimate their opponents. And the punishment they take as a result is comparable in a mimic mild way to the terrific licking the Japs are going to receive for thinking they could get away with their perfidy against such an opponent as Uncle Sam.

The heart 10 lead fell to the A. and South shut back the heart K to make West ruff which he did with the club 5. Back came the spade K which was trumped, the club A dropping the Q, the diamond A and then the diamond 2 to the Q. West then laid down his club K and fired back a spade, which was ruffed. The diamond 3 was ruffed in dummy to set up the rest of the suit, and the club 8 ruffed a heart return, the hand being completed then with the last three established diamonds.

Both majors, South probably had considerable length in the minors, and that North would have chosen to choose for trump the one he preferred, with possibly shortage in the other. But he didn't, and as a consequence presented more than the rubber game to South on a gameless deal, for an extra trick was scored.

If West had given South credit for having the kind of hand which he himself would have required to make that club bid at the level of three, he might have restrained himself from that costly double. But he reckoned he could get two tricks each in the minor suits which South had bid, plus one or two with his spade honors—and his own partner had bid the fourth suit, hearts.

WASHINGTON Report

A Cheer for "Pa" Watson, Southern Major General
President's Military Aide Has Much Charm and Tact

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—This city is like the show window of a fancy grocery store. There are all kinds of "specialties" behind its plate glass. Even if you are running fast, as all Washingtonians do, you can see the specialties without looking too hard. The big apples, for example. Polished to catch the eye.

If you are not an old timer you think those apples are the best kind of apples. Just because they are so red, are out in front and cost 25 cents a piece. But you know, if you have been around long, that the big, shiny apples are not a bit of good in a pie. They are tasteless. They have no flavor. Or substance, either. They are mere window dressing.

Many of the people you hear most about in Washington are window dressing. But behind the window dressing are some good, stout-hearted citizens who keep their own honesty and help run the capital show meaningfully.

I am going to try to tell you now and then about a few of these rare characters. I like to think of them working behind the scenes. Not maneuvering. Just plugging away. And not selling out to anybody. Not even to their bosses.

Here, to begin my series, is "Pa" Watson, military aide and secretary to the president of the United States. A major general in the United States Army. From West Point and Alabama, by way of Virginia.

General Watson is a southern gentleman from "way back. Kinda modest, too. With a wide laugh. The latest "good story," with probably more "influence" than Harry Hopkins and Felix Frankfurter added together and multiplied by the tag end of the national debt.

No kow-tower is "Pa" Watson (Edward Watson in the Congressional Record). Not that anybody ever heard his real name. But a hearty hunk of America who would fall over himself if he would try to bend a knee.

Mighty knowing behind his easy going way, too. You can hear him say when the intrigue around 1600 Pennsylvania avenue gets too thick, "Now look-y here. There ain't got to be no more foolin'." And no more foolin' there is. Not while Pa is lookin'.

Pa hasn't tried to iron himself out into a smoothie. His unabridged southern speech is part of his charm. It is a good smoke screen, too. Pa needs a smoke screen to protect him from some of the callers who want to stop around and see the president. Pa is the one man who makes the appointments to see the president. And is that a job? Honey-chile—it shore is!

I remember an appointment Pa made for me. What a nuisance I was! The "Womans' National Press club

Your eyes need all the help they can get. Don't handicap them with too little. Clean reflector bowls and bulbs frequently. You'll get from 25-30% more light.

You'll get more help for your eyes when you read, play games or sew, if your lamp shades are light-colored or have white linings. Clean or brush them regularly; or if they're too bad, replace with fresh shades.

Arrange your furniture and lamps so that you can, if necessary, make each lamp provide good light for more than one person. Be sure you're close enough to the lamp; a difference of 12 inches may cut your light in half.

Christmas SHOPPING

IT IS ALWAYS difficult to find an appropriate gift for the shut-in or the invalid. The persons to whom Christmas may mean nothing if their friends neglect them may be remembered by a gift of fruit. The Clarence Wolf grocery has a complete line of all fresh seasonal fruits and will be glad to help select and fill a gift basket or box.

SOMETHING old, something new, we don't know how you would make out to try to borrow something but the blue pottery and figurines at Pettit's are worthy gifts for the most exacting. This gift store has really blossomed out during the past year and now has become the mecca of all gift buyers in Circleville. Besides the figurines there are vases, ash trays, console sets and numerous other articles in the very pretty and inexpensive Roseville pottery. See these before finishing your Christmas shopping.

NO HOUSEKEEPER ever had too many small throw rugs. Therefore a gift of one of these would always please. The pretty rag rugs our grandparents used are now coming back to their own and mothers of small children find them a boon to good housekeeping. They are easily washed and very inexpensive. See them and others at Griffith and Martin.

SUGAR AND SPICE and everything nice goes into the making of the fruit cakes that are for sale this year at Wallace's Bakery. They are made in one, two and three pound cakes. Daintily wrapped they make delightful gifts. Ingredients for these cakes are now difficult to get for the home maker so leave your order for your cakes early. They are priced 75c, $1.50 and $2.25.

CERTAINLY many of our toys are not pre-war grade but how can they be? Steel axles can't be put on play wagons, metal barrels may not be put on play guns nor soft resilient kapok may not be used for stuffing a cuddly little animal or doll. These articles have gone to war and are precious priority materials for the duration. But we have gathered the best substitutes in the toy market for the children of this locality. We know that they will not mind helping make another Christmas happier for everybody by the substitution of these toys for the more sturdy ones. Harpster & Yost Hardware.

IT IS SHAPED like an Aladdin's Lamp and it takes little more than rubbing to brew the most delicious tea. Made of pottery it is the ideal gift for the little lady who likes her "spot" of tea with the scones in mid-afternoon when the "girls" drop in. This tea pot is for sale at the Kochheiser Hardware store where numerous other gifts may be found for the homemaker.

EVERY LITTLE mother will love the cute doll cribs and beds that we noted at the R. & R. Furniture store. The cuddliest of little blue lambs painted on the ends of the beds and little blue on the cribs. The cradles complete with soft mattress and pillow for $3.29 and the beds also have mattress and pillow for $4.79.

HER EYES will gleam to the glow of pearls, the gift of enduring beauty. One, two and three strand chokers that capture the splendor of the Orient. The L. M. Butch company, jewelers, have them priced from $7 to $48.50. One particularly beautiful single strand, we saw had a sterling clasp and was priced at $20. Make this your leading lady's most memorable Christmas—present her with pearls.

WE SERVICE radios, sweepers, washers, irons, toasters, Pettit's.

BEGIN NOW to prepare for Winter. Have that roof repaired before cold and freezing weather sets in. We have asphalt roof coating, felt roofing and roof paints of all kinds. Kochheiser Hardware.

BODY AND FENDER work. E. E. Clifton Sales and Service.

WHEN BLUE SMOKE spirals to the skies from millions of fires and chairs are drawn forward the long many legs stretched to the open fire will be wearing Intervenor socks in most cases. They are the best known and most appreciated gift that any man can receive. Caddy Miller's hat shop has a full line of them. Sizes are complete and the quality is guaranteed to be pre-war. Be sure to buy your man's gift at a man's store.

FOR THE "HIMS" in your life get sweaters. Brother, son, husband, father or the boy friend—a slip-over sweater from the W. T. Grant store would be appreciated. They are 42 percent wool and come in teal brown and tan. Sizes 30 to 36 are priced at $2.29 and from size 38 to 44 they are $2.79. See these sweaters before you select that he-man gift.

WINE with the meal helps make the holidays—Wine brings to the table a kindly good cheer. These days, that's helpful. You'll find that wine goes well with almost any warm dish you wish to serve. Enjoy it at the table—use it in your holiday cooking—it works miracles with food flavoring—Son's Grill has a supply of good wines.

ton's most recent Broadway appearance was in the comedy "Violet." Widmark plays the leading male role in the controversial "Trio," which is still to make its New York debut. The supporting cast is headed by Parker Fennelly, famed portrayer of rural roles, and includes Arthur Allen and Joyce Van Patten, child actress, now appearing in "The Perfect Marriage."

Sixth War Loan committees in many cities are making use of the appeal to buy bonds which Robert Montgomery made at the end of his recent "Cavalcade of America" broadcast. Delivered by a man who has been in the thick of the fighting for four years, it was truly a message packed with a punch.

Dix Davis, who plays "Randolph" on the "A Date With Judy" airshows, is dicker with a film studio for an important role in a movie dealing with effects of the war years on the younger generation of Americans. Young Davis started his acting career at the age of 11 in an Eddie Cantor film.

The Silver Star medal and a "Blind Date" armful in one day—that's the bonanza which Collected Bob Fitch of Fargo, N. D., collected recently. The service man, who has also received the Presidential Citation, got a new award for heroic action in Los Angeles in the Pacific. What won him the "Blind Date" with a glamorous girl, though, was this crick: "If you pick me, I'll tell you where to get some cigarettes!"

"Sebastian," Lou Costello's "little brother" on his Thursday radio show with Bud Abbott, is played by Lou and named after Lou's father. The latter, by the way, came to America from Italy as a boy and became a successful life insurance salesman.
